Chart Characteristics - Group 4
 Hard Pullback after New High
 GDX, GLD, SLV, AGG, TLT, LQD

GDX became way overbought and closed below its Chandelier Exit with a hard 3-day pullback. There is no such thing as a perfect exit strategy and sometimes trailing stops work great. However, they often trigger after a sharp decline and when the ETF is mildly oversold, which provides the next mean-reversion setup. This is why I generally prefer profit targets over trailing stops.

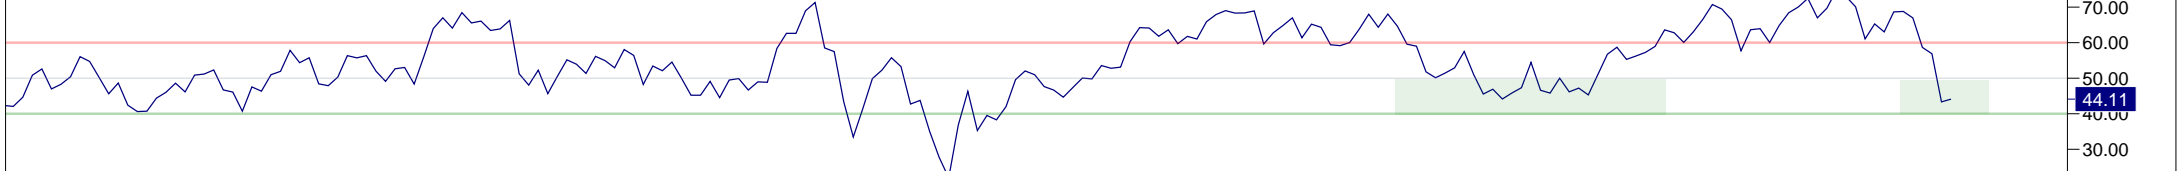

GDX surged 46% and could retraced 50-67% of the prior advance. Watch the 37 area for a bounce

GLD went from bullish and extremely overbought to mildly oversold as RSI fell to 50. Sometimes GLD bounces immediately (green lines) and sometimes more time is needed to stabilize. The long-term trend is up and the pullback is viewed more as an opportunity than a threat.

SLV became extremely overbought and fell hard, but RSI has yet to make it back to the 40-50 zone to signal a mild oversold condition. This is still a pullback within a bigger uptrend, but I would prefer to see RSI hit the 50 area and see some stabilization before expecting a bounce. Keep in mind that silver is part industrial metal and part precious (just ask Smeagal).

TLT is in a long-term uptrend and mildly oversold after a four day pullback. This is the sharpest 4-day decline since June 4th. RSI is in the 40-50 zone.

Chart Characteristics - Group 6
Failed Flag/Pennant Breakout
IGV, FDN, SKYY

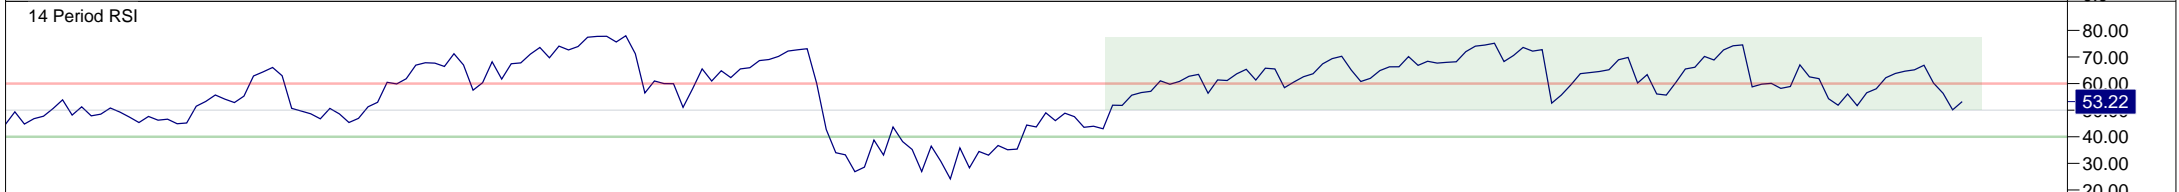

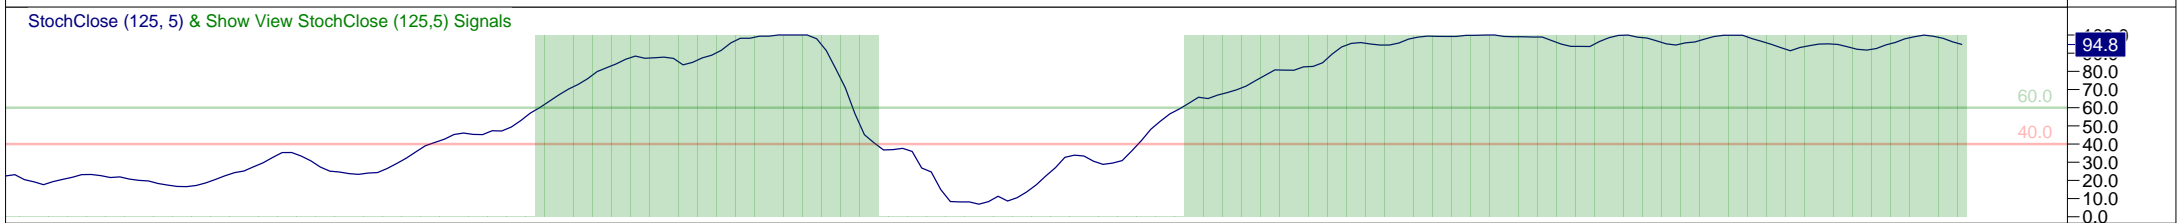

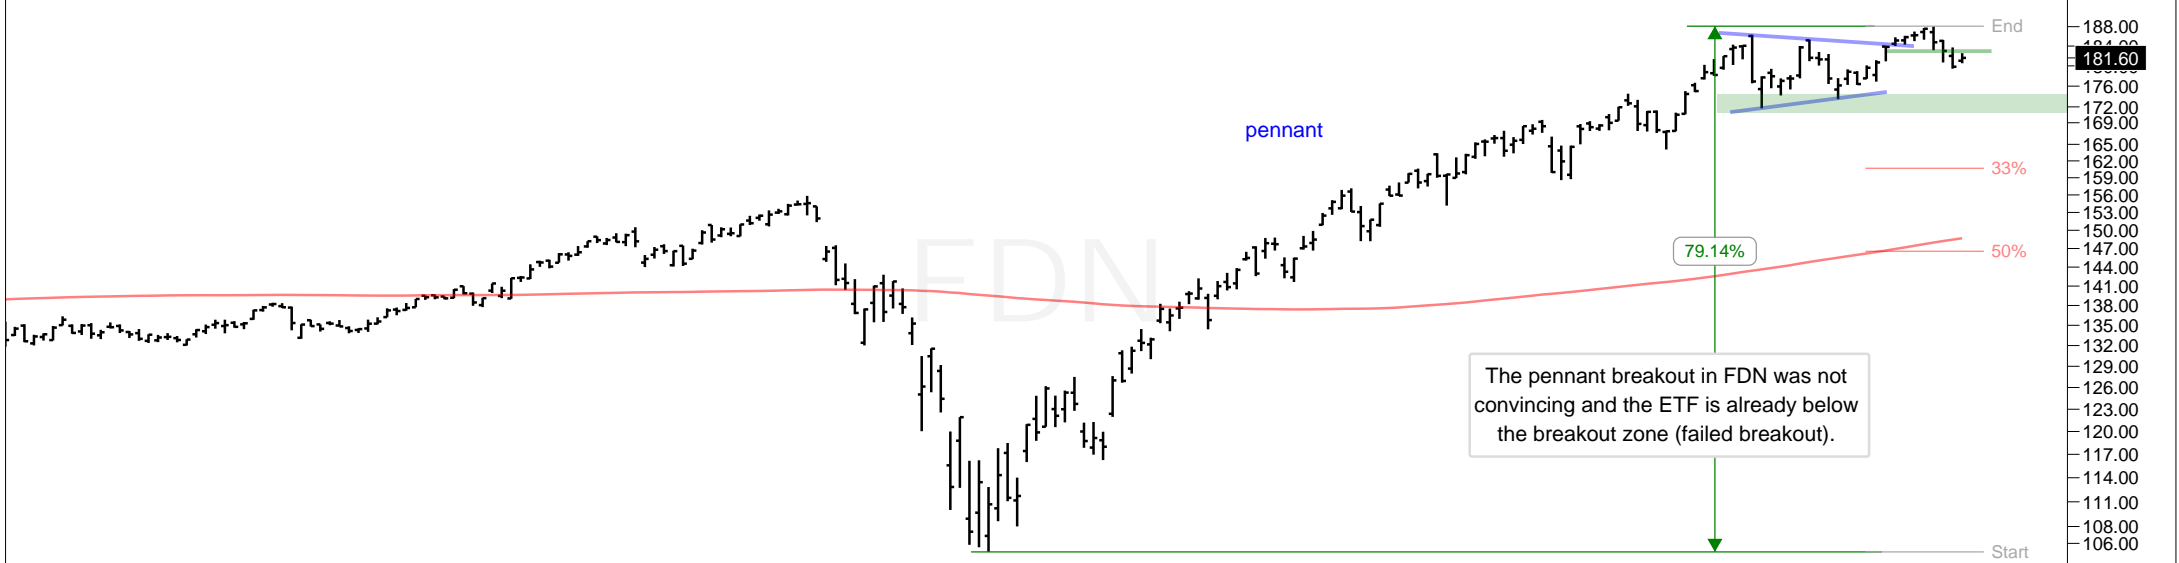

IGV highlights the conundrum between pattern trading and indicator-reversion trading. The failed breakout is negative and IGV is ripe for a correction. However, RSI is in the 40-50 zone and mildly oversold. My 6th sense tells me to give this one and others like it further room to correct.

The last 2 pullbacks greater than 8%

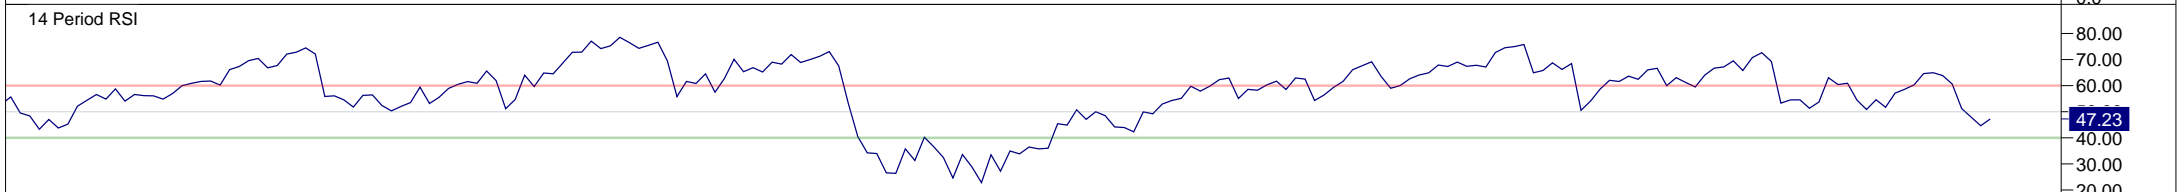

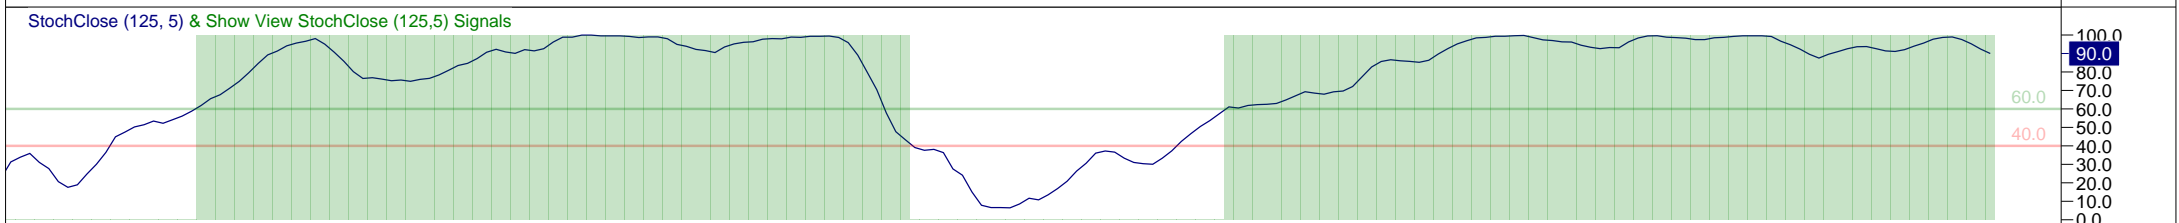

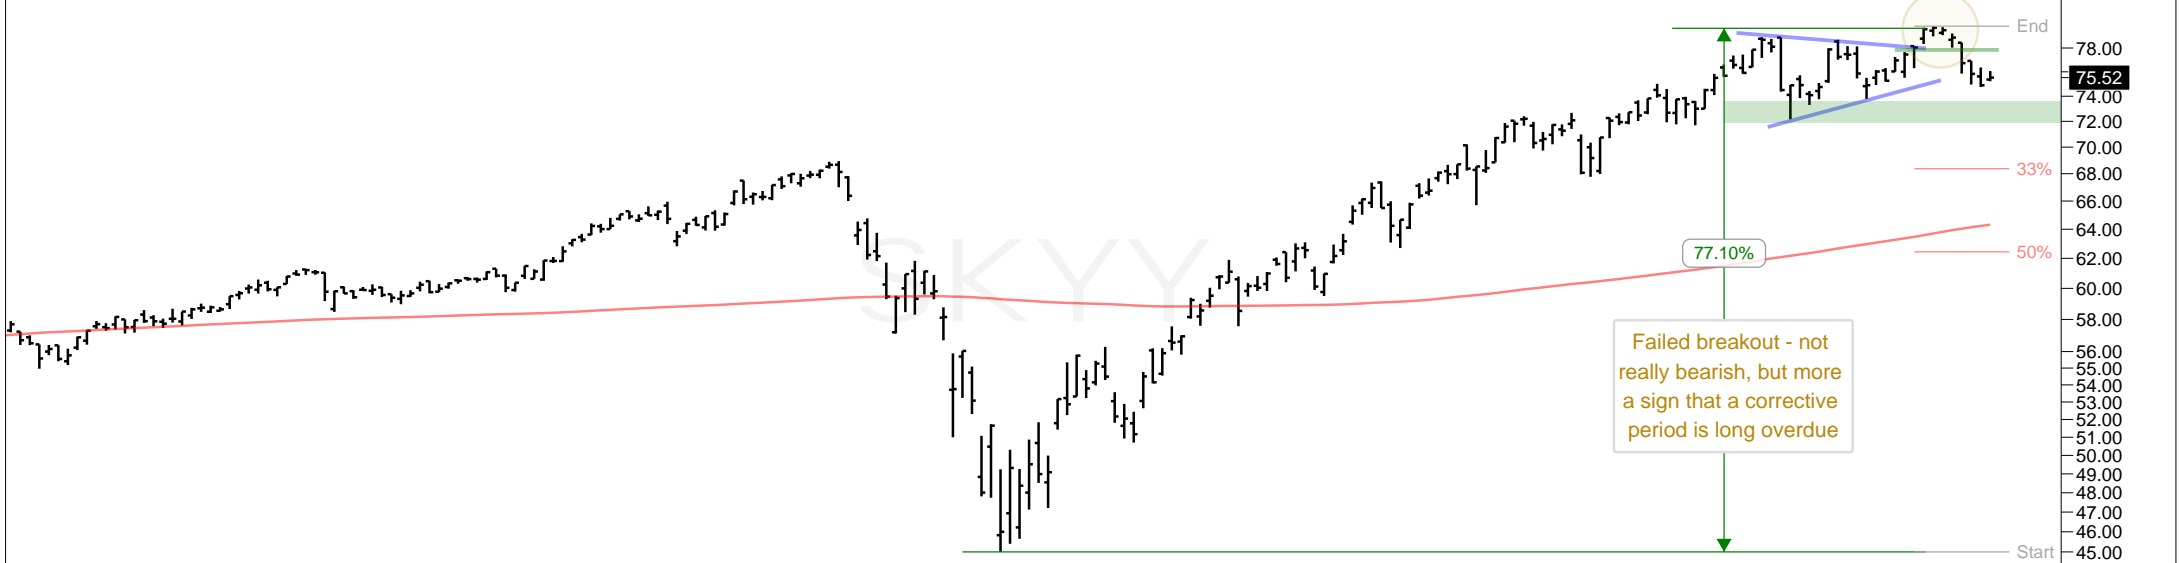

The pennant breakout in IGV was not convincing and the ETF is already below the breakout zone (failed breakout). A deeper pullback could retrace around 1/3 to 1/2 of the prior advance.

 Consolidation Breakout and Did Not Exceed June High
 RSP

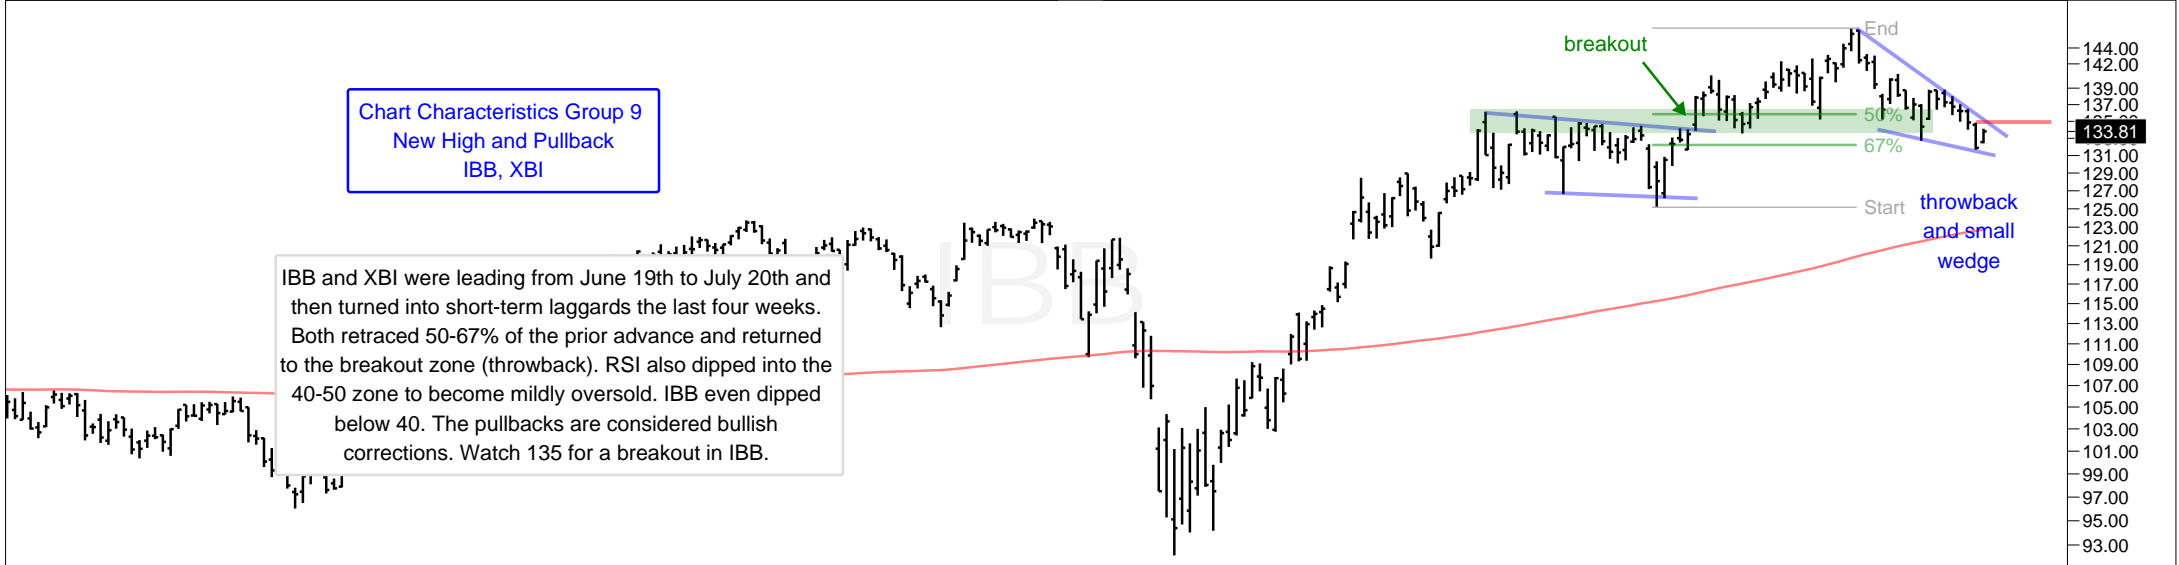

RSP stands alone because it has a consolidation breakout in mid July and an extension higher the last several weeks, but has yet to exceed its June high.

Chart Characteristics Group 9
New High and Pullback
IBB, XBI

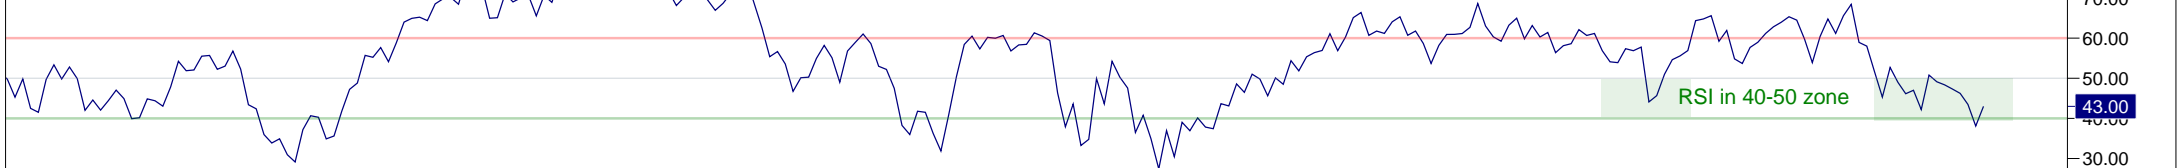

IBB and XBI were leading from June 19th to July 20th and then turned into short-term laggards the last four weeks. Both retraced 50-67% of the prior advance and returned to the breakout zone (throwback). RSI also dipped into the 40-50 zone to become mildly oversold. IBB even dipped below 40. The pullbacks are considered bullish corrections. Watch 135 for a breakout in IBB.
