ChartNotes
Saturday, December 12th

SPY broke out of a medium-term triangle on V-day, vaccine day on November 9th, and recorded new highs the last few weeks. The ETF continues to work its way higher with a tight rising channel.

IWM continues to work its way higher since the island reversal on November 3rd. The ETF is up a market leading 24% since early November and holding the ATR Trailing Stop, which is currently at 183.93. IWM is over 30% above its rising 200-day, the most ever (since 1991).

QQQ broke out of a medium-term triangle in November and hit a new high early this week. The breakout is long-term bullish. Short-term, QQQ is right near the ATR Trailing Stop.

The Healthcare SPDR (XLV), Medical Devices ETF (IHI) and Healthcare Providers ETF (IHF) broke out of short-term bullish continuation patterns last week and pulled back a little the last few weeks. The breakouts are still holding and still bullish. The Consumer Staples SPDR (XLP) also has a pennant breakout working.

The Software ETF (IGV) and Internet ETF (FDN) still have medium-term Ascending Triangle patterns working, which are bullish continuation patterns. Both closed strong on Thursday-Friday and their breakouts are still in play.

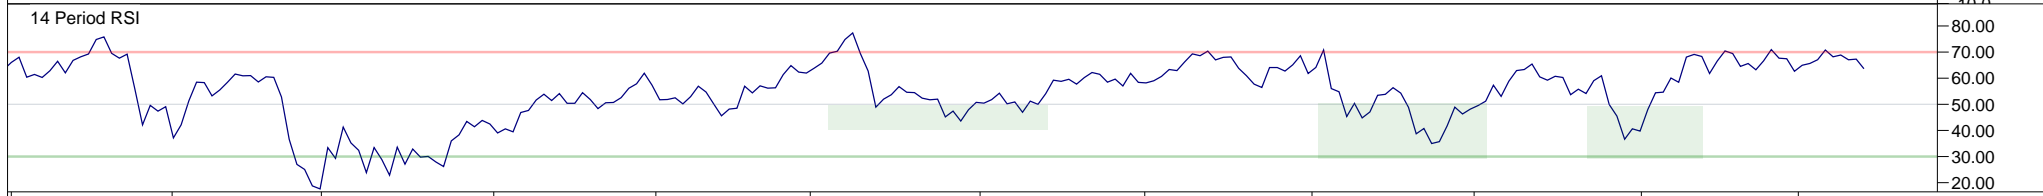

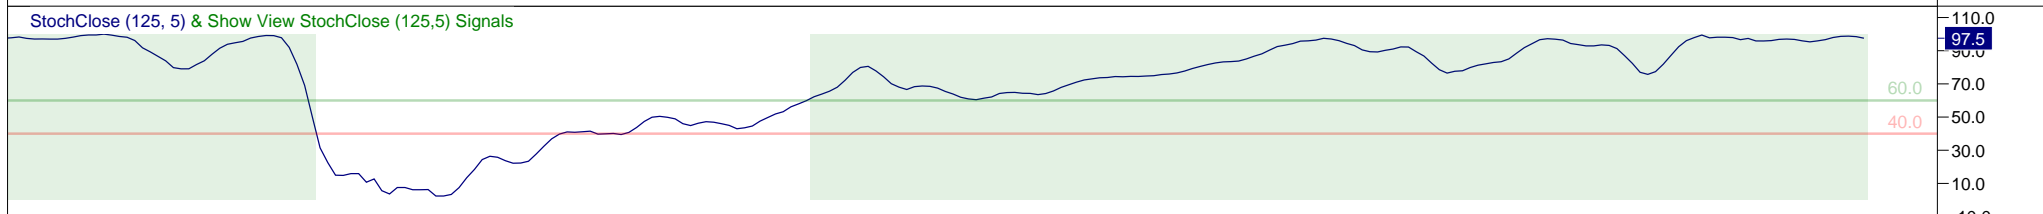

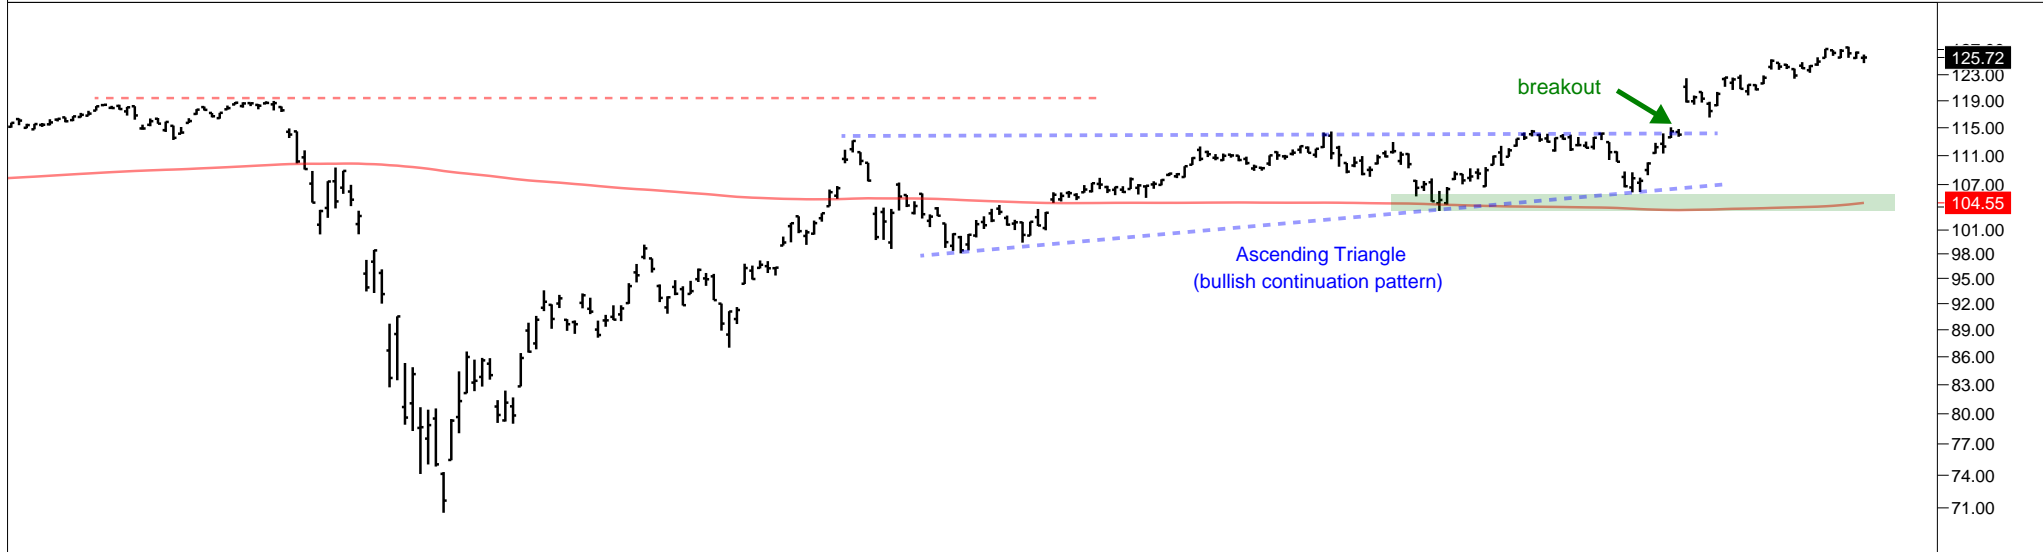

The Home Construction ETF (ITB) is putting me to sleep with its narrowing consolidation and tight trading range. This triangle is still a consolidation within an uptrend and typically a bullish continuation pattern. RSI continues to flirt with its oversold zone. Watch for a StochClose pop above .80 or a pattern break.

The Residential REIT ETF (REZ) is stronger than the Real Estate SPDR (XLRE) because it broke out of its five month trading range and exceeded its June high. The ETF formed a pennant after the breakout and then fell back to test support. The moment of truth is nigh!

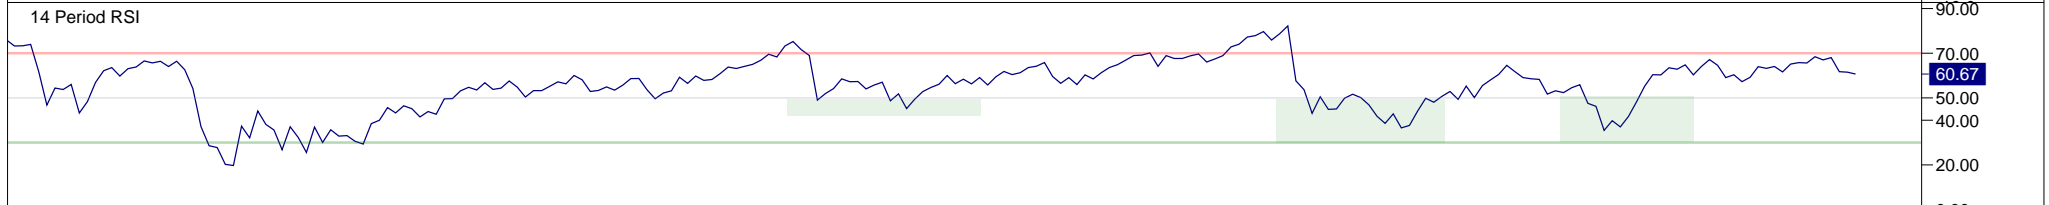

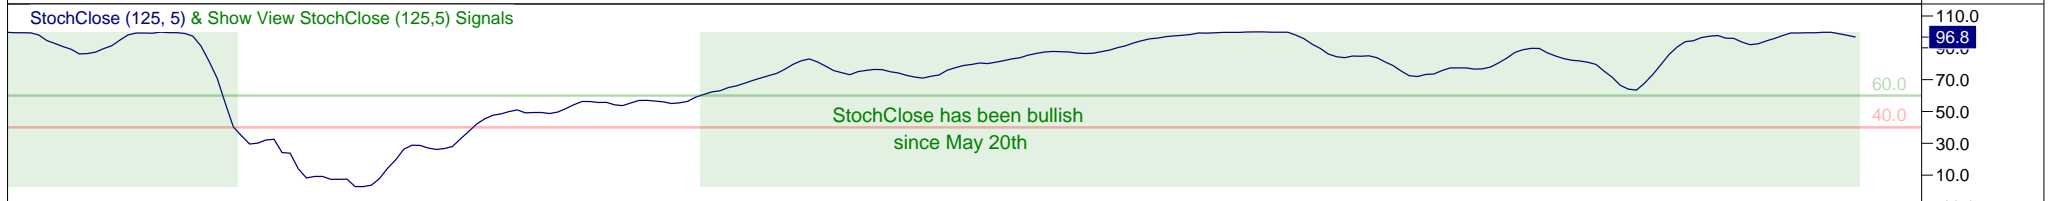

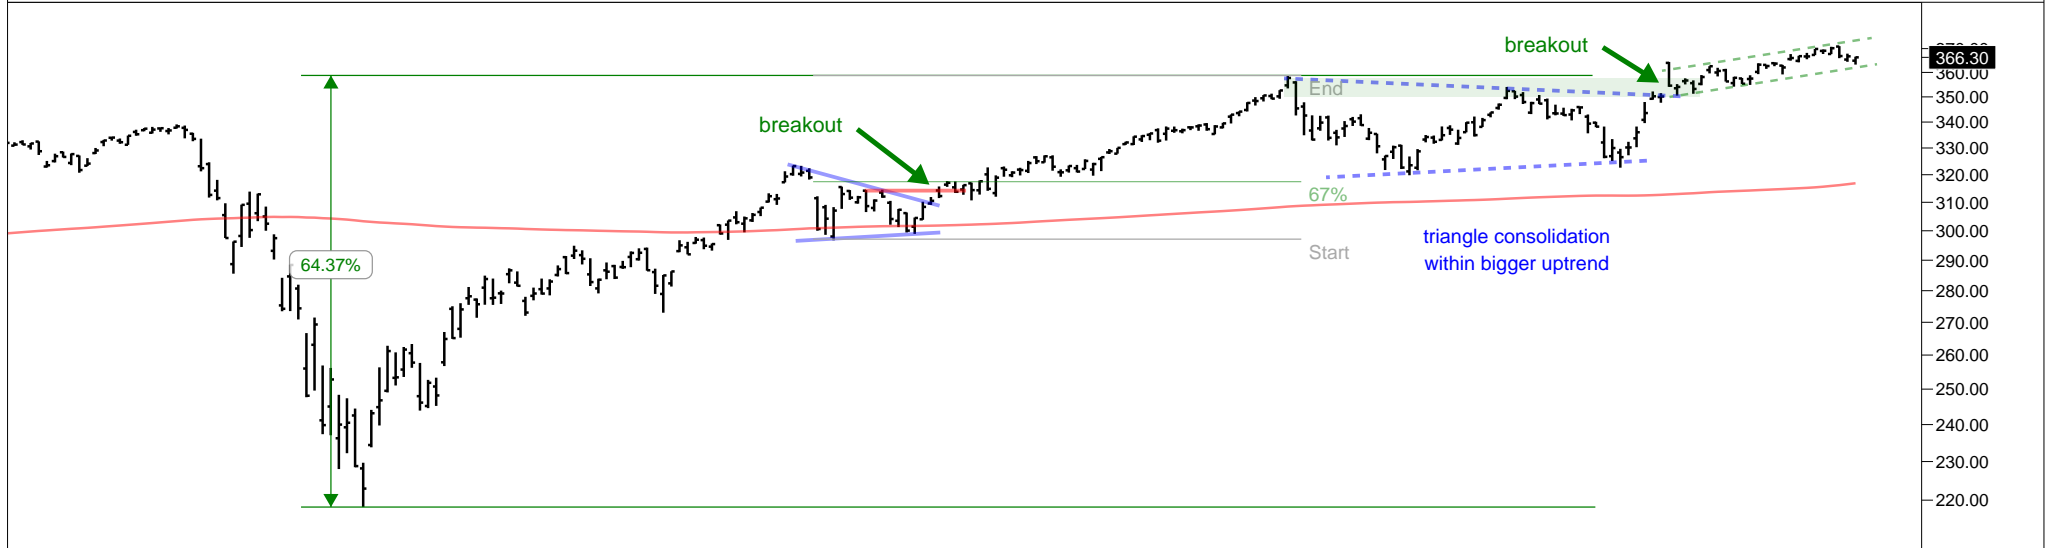

The Biotech ETF (IBB) is holding its breakout zone.

The DB Agriculture ETF (DBA) broke out of a pennant (small falling wedge).

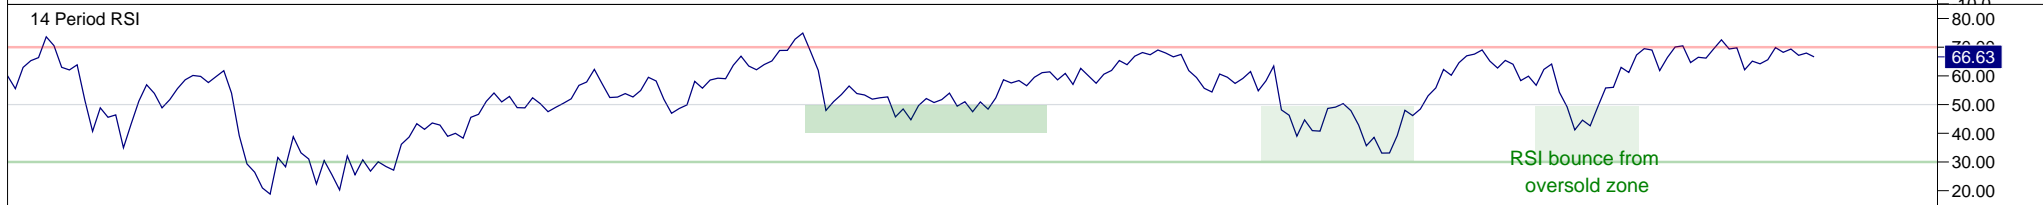

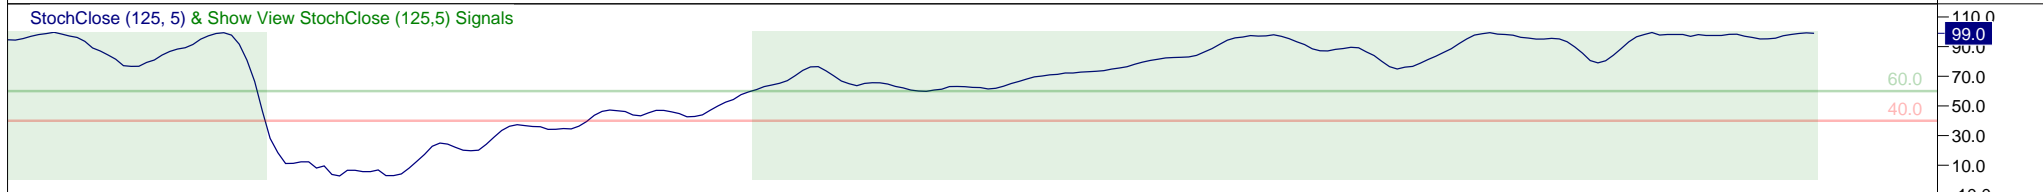

The Corporate Bond ETF (LQD) is breaking out of a small falling flag. Prior, it broke out of a larger falling wedge in early November.
